WATER RESOURCE MODELING

Accompanying the Sussex County Open Space and Recreation Plan Update are three Technical Reports which include the results of the detailed ArcGIS mapping analysis run to model water resources and prioritize land for preservation and stewardship. These reports are as follows:

- ✓ Technical Report I – Land Preservation (Maps 1-13)
- ✓ Technical Report II – Land Stewardship (Maps A-I)
- ✓ Technical Report III – Analysis and Recommendations (Maps I-IV)

Each report contains a table detailing the metrics, data, and mapping for the water resource areas studied in Sussex County. The final report includes a table detailing the priority lands for preservation, as identified by the water resource model in Sussex County. These are identified on a parcel basis and are ranked by their proximity to already preserved lands. This table, along with the accompanying mapping, provides the tools by which the County Open Space Committee, Board of Chosen Freeholders, and local officials can target their efforts to protect lands in Sussex County – focusing on those properties that support the water resources integral to the County and expand existing public open spaces

Technical Report II - Land Stewardship

The Use of Stewardship Criteria

In addition to preservation priorities, the Open Space and Recreation Plan Update addresses stewardship needs. Specifically, many water resources of the county would benefit from additional restoration and stewardship actions within riparian areas, existing or former wetlands, and developed areas that contribute stormwater flows to surface waters.

Criteria have been selected and mapped that identify areas where stewardship activities would provide a material benefit to water quality, water flows and ecological improvements to waters of Sussex County. These criteria generally address:

- Subwatersheds with high levels of impervious surface as well as those with streams that have high peaking rates (indicating flows during rainfall events are much higher than during dry periods). Water quantity and quality criterion
- Impervious surfaces that are in close proximity to streams (providing more direct flow of stormwater into the streams). Water quantity and quality criterion
- Stormwater outfalls directly from impervious areas and as outlets from stormwater basins. Water quantity and quality criterion
- Stream habitat integrity and high slope stream segments, indicating erosion problems and stewardship potential. Water quality criteria
- High density of roads crossing streams. Water quality criterion

- Riparian areas, wetlands, and former wetlands that can be improved or restored. Water quality and ecological criteria
- Existing wetlands and riparian areas in close proximity to developed areas. Ecological criterion

It is important to recognize that these criteria are used as indicators. Stewardship activities would take place only when conditions have been confirmed through field investigations. The purpose of the criteria is to help focus attention on the waters with the greatest potential benefits of stewardship.

The more criteria are relevant to a specific area, the higher the likelihood that restoration and stewardship is necessary to improve water resources. However, a very high incidence of criteria may also indicate that stewardship costs will be very high, perhaps requiring structural engineering projects.

A general approach for the use of stewardship criteria is as follows:

1. FACTS: Selection and mapping of stewardship criteria
2. SCREENING EVALUATION: Identification of areas that appear viable and high priority for stewardship actions, using different techniques:
  - a. Modification of the vegetative cover to improve water resources. These projects shift land from vegetative cover with higher runoff and pollutant loads to those with lower runoff and pollutant loads, through creation of riparian buffers, revegetation of agriculturally-modified wetlands, etc.
  - b. Modification of stormwater systems to reduce stormwater volume, rate of discharge, water pollutant loads, or some combination thereof. This approach includes green infrastructure, modification of uncontrolled outfalls, modification of existing stormwater basins (such as changing detention basins to infiltration basins), etc.
  - c. Reconstruction of stream channels, stream corridors, riparian areas and flood plains, ponds and lakes. Reconstruction requires physical modification of the land surface, not just the vegetative cover as discussed above.
3. PARTNERSHIPS: Identification of viable partners for stewardship activities within high priority areas. There will inevitably be enough high priority areas to greatly exceed available resources. Therefore, it is appropriate to focus efforts on areas that have good partnership potential. It is also likely that within areas with available partnerships, there will be more than one possible project area for stewardship projects.
4. DETAILED EVALUATION: Field evaluation of potential stewardship projects within the areas that have good partnerships, to identify the projects that most clearly would benefit water resources and require actions that are appropriate for the skill set of the partners.

5. PROJECT DEVELOPMENT: Determine which partner will have responsibility for each aspect of the project. Identify relevant funding and other implementation resources. Funding potential is likely to be an initial screening approach used by the partnerships, but at this point, specific funding needs will be identified and sought.

The following 9 maps illustrate characteristics used to identify opportunities for land stewardship projects to protect water resources in Sussex County. Each map targets a defining characteristic important to water quality and/or quantity. These criteria are used as indicators, to focus attention on areas that will benefit most from stewardship. These are defined in greater detail on the accompanying table and in the Plan Update.

Maps A-C focus on the reduction of direct stormwater flows.

Map D-F focus on the reduction of stream erosion

Maps G-I focus on the restoration of riparian areas and wetlands.

Map A shows the amount of impervious surface within each watershed in Sussex County. The different levels are broken up by percent of impervious surface out of the total surface of the watershed.

Map B further breaks down the percent of impervious surface within riparian areas by subwatersheds.

Map C displays where each stormwater outfall and basin is throughout the county. .

Map D marks the AMNET stream habitat scores throughout the county, displaying the integrity of each stream. The different habitat categories are optimal, suboptimal, and marginal.

Map E counts the amount of road crossings per stream mile. The individual crossings are shown, as well as the density of road crossings per each subwatershed.

Map F identifies high slope stream segments that are 500 feet or above.

Map G shows riparian areas in altered conditions, to identify former riparian areas that can be improved or restored.

Map H illustrates agriculturally altered wetlands as well as other wetlands and preserved farms within the county. This results in the identification of areas with high potential for wetlands restoration.

Map I identifies wetlands and riparian areas within 200 meters of developed lands. Due to their proximity to development, these areas are likely to be disrupted.

Water Priorities for Land Preservation in Sussex County

The Sussex County Open Space Plan Update will include a set of maps that provide information about important water-related characteristics. The following table provides the three “focus” areas, measurable characteristics, purpose, metrics and data. Each “focus” has an equal weight, and each “characteristic” within the focus area has an equal weight.

Within each Focus Area – the individual characteristics are given an equal weight. The map for each polygon reflects areas that may have a weight of 1, 2, 3, 4, or 5. The overall map may be a combination of the three focus maps, with scores of 1 to 15, or a gradation of scores to allow for more flexibility in how the information is used. The user will be able to use the maps individually, or together – depending on the purpose. The scores are based on polygons and not on individual properties. Properties can be evaluated on a weighted-average basis or other method.

Accompanying the Sussex County Open Space and Recreation Plan Update are three Technical Reports which include the results of the detailed ArcGIS mapping analysis run to model water resources and prioritize land for preservation and stewardship. These reports are as follows:

- ✓ Technical Report I – Land Preservation (Maps 1-13)
- ✓ Technical Report II – Land Stewardship (Maps A-I)
- ✓ Technical Report III – Analysis and Recommendations (Maps I-IV)

Each report contains a table detailing the metrics, data, and mapping for the water resource areas studied in Sussex County. The final report includes a table detailing the priority lands for preservation, as identified by the water resource model in Sussex County. These are identified on a parcel basis and are ranked by their proximity to already preserved lands. This table, along with the accompanying mapping, provides the tools by which the County Open Space Committee, Board of Chosen Freeholders, and local officials can target their efforts to protect lands in Sussex County – focusing on those properties that support the water resources integral to the County and expand existing public open spaces

Technical Report III – Analysis and Recommendations

The following maps identify targets for protection of the water resources in Sussex County. These maps are centered on the three focus areas: hydrology, stream and aquifer quality, and protecting aquatic ecosystem functions.

The first two maps (IA and IB) address Focus Area 1- Hydrology

Maps IIA and IIB address Focus Area 2, Stream and Aquifer Quality

The third set of maps, IIIA and IIIB map the five characteristics in the Aquatic Ecosystem Functions focus area.

The final set of maps (IVA and IVB) is a composite of all three focus areas. The maps exclude preserved lands from scored areas, and score the rest of the areas from 1-12.

Hydrology:

Map IA scores different areas a priority level 1-5. The maps scores areas using a weight of 1 for each individual characteristic. Map IA are ranked from areas that have one of the characteristics present, to other areas where all characteristics are present.

Map IB further prioritizes these areas, separating them between high and low priority. Low priority areas are defined as areas with only 1 or 2 characteristics, where high priority areas have 3 to 5.

Stream and Aquifer Quality:

Map IIA scores different areas 1-4 depending on the number of stream and aquifer quality characteristics present.

Map IIB further prioritizes these areas, separating them between high and low priority. Low priority areas are defined as areas with only 1 or 2 characteristics, where high priority areas have 3 or 4.

Aquatic Ecosystem Functions:

Map IIIA scores different areas 1-4 depending on the number of the aquatic ecosystem function characteristics that are present.

Map IIIB further differentiates areas of high and low priority. Low priority is defined as those areas with 1 or 2 characteristics present, where high priority areas have 3 or 4.

Overall:

Map IVA ranges from scores 1-12, but the distribution is mapped in seven groupings, since virtually no areas scored 11 or 12. Again, the scores correlate to the number of present characteristics.

Map IVB splits the categories into high and low priority, 6-12 and 1-5 respectively.

Included within this report is the summary analysis of the merged mapping. There are several assumptions inherent in this review of the data:

- Preserved lands are excluded (state, federal, nonprofit land trust) – for land protection opportunities only those properties that are not already publicly owned were considered.
- Small parcels are to be excluded (less than 1.00 acres in size) – meaningful land preservation in Sussex County should focus on properties of a size to add value to the resource.
- Highlight those properties located within 500 feet of preserved lands – to identify those opportunities for expanded already protected corridors.

In summary:

There are 16,296 acres of non-preserved lands in Sussex County that are “high priority” per the water resource modeling analysis. Once all properties that are below 1.00 acres in size are removed, there are 14,776 acres potentially available for preservation. Screened further, those properties located within 500 feet of preserved land represents 9,959 acres of high priority lands in Sussex County, in 1,468 properties. Note, this is solely the acreage of the portion of the tax parcel that is identified as “high priority” for water resource protection. The total acreage of these 1,468 tax parcels is 52,159 acres.

The tables are useful, in part to show that many tax parcels have relatively small high priority areas as a percentage of the overall property, or in terms of total high priority acres. If they are important links for river corridors or other masses of high priority areas, then the parcel may become a potential acquisition site, even though their total high priority area or percentage was low. On the other hand, if they are not important links, they may fall off the list.

There are many ways to review and use the water resource modeling results. These Technical Reports provide the basis and analysis for local decision makers and acquisition entities to assess groups of parcels within project areas and see what works. The composite maps with the seven groupings are a useful tool for this endeavor.
